Statement of Academic Integrity

Northwestern University students and faculty are committed to scholarly principles that respect and acknowledge individual achievement. Because of this, certain behaviors are viewed as unacceptable, including cheating, plagiarism, falsifying or fabricating information, and aiding or abetting academic dishonesty. Students who violate these principles are subject to penalties, including course failure and dismissal from Northwestern University.

Statement of Academic and Financial Obligation

Students who register for a course are considered enrolled for the duration, and are expected to attend all sessions of the courses for which they are registered. Excessive absences do not signal a student's intent to drop or withdraw, and may be cause for failure in the course. If a student does formally drop or withdraw, the student is responsible to pay any tuition balance remaining on the account, according to the refund schedule determined by Northwestern University Student Financial Services. Students wishing to change their registration in any way—by adding or dropping a course—must do so through the Office of the Registrar.

By signing this application, electronically transmitting it, or printing, signing, and mailing the application, I certify that the information contained in this application is accurate and complete to the best of my knowledge. I will notify the Office of Special Students promptly if any of this information changes. I understand that furnishing inaccurate or misleading information can result in denial of admission or revocation of admission and dismissal from Northwestern University. If inaccurate or misleading information is discovered after an offer of admission is made, I will be given an opportunity to explain such information to the Office of Special Students, which will render a final decision not subject to appeal regarding an appropriate outcome, which may include revocation of admission and dismissal from Northwestern University.
