MASTER OF ARTS IN SPORTS ADMINISTRATION

Sports is one of the largest economic enterprises in the world, employing professionals with a variety of business skills and specializations who have one common interest: the business of sports.

As one of the largest economic enterprises in the world, sports provides an arena for great business careers. Northwestern University’s Master of Arts in Sports Administration (MSA) program can be a vital link for professionals who aspire to begin or enhance a career in sports.

The MSA program is taught by first-rate faculty members whose networks include team executives, sports agents, corporate sports consultants and a broad range of other professionals in collegiate, professional and amateur athletics. In fact, almost all of the MSA faculty have worked or currently work in sports administration, from sponsorships to agencies to professional sports teams. Whether a student wants to become a front office manager, college athletics administrator or sports marketer, he or she will find instruction and guidance based on first-hand knowledge of the opportunities and challenges one can expect in the business of sports.

The MSA curriculum includes six core courses that help students build a solid foundation of strategic, analytic and creative thinking that is vital to the business of sports. Additionally, students select three elective courses, a leadership course and either a thesis or customized capstone project that culminates the learning experience.

The prestigious credentials and rigorous standards of Northwestern University — and access to Chicago’s rich and fast-paced sports community — provide students with invaluable hands-on experience. From guest speakers and program events, students are exposed to professionals who are shaping the Chicago, national and even international sports marketplace.

With the outstanding academic pedigree of Northwestern, a strong alumni network, elite networking opportunities and the convenience of learning online or attending evening courses in Chicago or Evanston, the Master of Arts in Sports Administration program is well positioned among top graduate programs in the field.
The Master’s in Sports Administration requires successful completion of eleven courses. Students must complete six core courses, three elective courses, a leadership course (481) and a capstone project (498) or thesis project (590).

Applicants must hold a bachelor's degree from a regionally accredited institution or its foreign equivalent. A competitive undergraduate record that indicates strong academic ability is required. Work, internship or research experience in the sports industry is highly desirable but not a requirement. The Graduate Record Examination (GRE) is not required, but strong scores bolster chances for admission. Visiting scholars, who earn no university credit, complete a shorter application.

APPLICATION CHECKLIST

- Online application — access from sps.northwestern.edu/msa and then click “Start Application Process.”
- $75 nonrefundable application fee
- Sealed copies of official transcripts from ALL attended colleges and universities.
- Official transcripts must arrive in our office in the original sealed envelope issued by the institution. Northwestern University School of Professional Studies accepts electronic transcripts from U.S. institutions via secure electronic transcript providers. Northwestern’s MSA Program was an absolutely invaluable experience for me. The professionals that I learned from as speakers and classmates, allowed me to understand various areas of sports and figure out the direction I wanted to take. Studying sports administration at a Big Ten institution in Chicago has so many incredible benefits, many of which I did not even realize at the time and continue to benefit from. The network and opportunities I received because of Northwestern, without a doubt, have paved my way for a wonderful career in collegiate athletics.”

Maureen Palchak (MSA ’08), Assistant Athletic Director, Northwestern University

“The opportunity for personal networking was huge. Being exposed to people in every imaginable position within the industry, I immediately realized that the world of sports is so much bigger than the NBA and NFL.”

Brad Bauer (MSA ’14), Windy City Bulls – Sr. Account Executive, Corporate Partnerships and Sales, Chicago Bulls
