Juvenile Injustice - America's Locked-up Children

Tuesday, July 14

Location: Online via Zoom

On any given day, over 48,000 adolescents in the United States are incarcerated and held in restrictive, correctional-style facilities, often without having had a trial. The road back to a normal life after incarceration is difficult without support. Progress is slowly being made. Policy makers are beginning to recognize that young people are still developing, and opportunities for treatment and rehabilitation can be life changing for them and of benefit to society. Celia Colón was one of those young people. She grew up in a physically and emotionally abusive home and was recruited into a Chicago gang by the age of 12. At 18, she was given a 15-year sentence for attempted murder. A prison program coached her to redirect her life, and she was released after serving six years. Join us to hear about Celia's remarkable journey to rebuild her life. Learn about the obstacles to rehabilitation in the juvenile prison system and hear how you can help influence some of the reforms still needed. This event is free and open to all current OLLI members. Two-step registration is required.

Celia Colón is a nationally recognized leader and public advocate for smart justice reform. She is the founder of Giving Others Dreams, a non-profit organization that is committed to assisting and supporting justice-impacted women.
